A film by Denis Becker & Jean-Michel Dury

Synopsis

Annick, Jean-Jacques and Philippe live in Brittany, in the Vosges and in Burgundy. Annick, Jean-Jacques and Philippe are also Dianann, Ioan and Gwinver Druids, Neo-Druids. They guide us through magnificent natural sites and initiate us to their singular spiritual and philosophical worlds. Are they ecologists, poets, slightly mad or just walking their own paths? Everyone will find an answer with this documentary at the gates of shamanism, between imagination and reality. A sensitive film close to the protagonists' feelings.

Director's Note

This film is the result of a long friendship between Denis Becker, co-author of the documentary, and Jean-Jacques, the Vosges Druid. They had been friends for almost ten years before Jean-Jacques confessed to his friend that he was also loan, a Druid, a Neo-Druid. loan opened up his Druidic network; that is how Denis met Dianann then Gwinver and many others. A film project was born.

A few years later I joined the team to make the film; for that I needed to appropriate the project, make it mine. I met the Druids, attended ceremonies, and we exchanged a lot. I suggested to Denis to reduce the number of speakers so as to present a portrait of three of them: Dianann, loan and Gwinver.

The protagonists agreed to retrace their quests to testify about who they are, or rather, who they have become. The theme of the personal journey has always been very present in my films; here it is very visual.

Neo-Druids seek by connecting with nature, by making links with the divine. For this they go to natural sites, full of history or particularly active at the telluric level, they are often beautiful places. I asked Dianann, loan and Gwinver to take me to these natural sites that highlight for each of them a facet of their personality and a step in their individual quest. This documentary, in the midst of stunning landscapes, is thus an epic journey where, little by little, the characters reveal themselves in the depths of a cinematic puzzle that is as captivating as a trance.
